

McGill Begins Bloody Binge

Publicity Committee?

The vamp pictured above will not appear in this costume at the Blood Drive which opens at 10 this morning. She plans to show up as a gorilla. Blood Drive Chairman Michael Mauer has expressed his satisfaction that she is not vampirishly inclined.

George Hees, Minister of Trade and Commerce, will officiate at the opening ceremony of the McGill Blood Drive, which takes place on the steps of the Arts Building at 12 noon today.

After the ceremony, Hees and the other officiating dignitaries will be transported in a procession to the Students' Union.

The dignitaries include: Dr. F. Cyril James, Principal and Vice Chancellor of McGill; Dr. Lloyd G. Stevenson, Dean of Medicine; Dr. D. L. Mordell, Dean of Engineering; M. Marcel, head of the Red Cross Blood Donor Clinics in Quebec; and Mr. Pigott, head of Montreal Blood Donor Clinics.

STUDENT VIP'S

At the Union, after speeches by Michael Mauer, the Hon. George Hees, Dr. James, and Mr. Marcel, Nancy Cavanagh will cut the ribbon to mark the official opening of the Blood Drive for '61.

The Blood Drive Committee invites all students to accompany the procession and the floats which will assemble at noon and wend their way to the Union shortly afterwards. The executive also emphasized that, although the Blood Drive officially begins at approximately noon, the blood clinic will be open from 10 am.

Yesterday, a one-day mobile clinic was held in the Medical Building. In this one day, a greater percentage of medical and dental students gave blood than was given by these students for the total run of the Drive last year. However, Mike Mauer, chairman of this year's drive, explained that the results were not quite up to his expectations; he has been reassured that more blood will be forthcoming from these faculties in the next week.

The entertainment committee revealed plans for a star-studded week. Performers will be presented in the Union ballroom at 1 pm every day for the run of the Blood Drive. All students, including those who will have already given blood and those who are ineligible to give blood, are invited to attend these performances.

DESJARDINS CAST

Today the entire cast from the Desjardins revue will be featured at the Union.

On Thursday the noon hour program will feature Donna Louthood, Peter Usher, and Peter Weldon, three McGill students who will sing folksongs to the accompaniment of Bryant Shiller, another McGillian.

CKGM, a Montreal radio station, will have a mobile unit broadcasting from the Blood clinic on Friday. In addition, Bonnie and Lin, two songstresses, will perform with Barry Jones, their accompanist.

GILLIES EMCEES

Next Monday, Bib Gillies will emcee a program which will include Sarita and Annalee Elman, and Bryant Shiller. Shiller will also perform the following day, when Denny Vaughan, a TV personality, will appear at the Union.

The publicity committee of the Blood Drive reports that McGill has been given extensive coverage by a number of the TV and radio stations. Mike Mauer was interviewed by CJAD last Friday. He also appeared with Aviva Kravetz, Vice Chairman of the Drive, on programs broadcasted by both CKVL and CFCE. Carte Blanche presented a TV interview with Aviva Kravetz and a number of networks have promised TV coverage during the opening days of the Blood Drive.

Visiting Russian Students Talk At Five Man Panel Discussion

by JOY FENSTON

Alexander Lebedev and Yuri Mashin, two visiting Russian students, met McGillians Gordon Echenberg, Roman Karpishka, and Andrew Roman in a noon-hour discussion yesterday.

Because Mashin speaks no English, Lebedev did all the talking for the two, but they both agreed upon the opinions he expressed.

The discussion was moderated by Robert Carswell, President of the Students' Society.

Andrew Roman asked whether Premier Krushchev was prepared to sacrifice the lives of Russian soldiers for the sake of East Germany.

Lebedev responded that his government did support the East German regime, and believed it was time to put an end to all reminders of the last war. "We don't want German militarism to rise again", he said, "and would like to conclude treaties with East and West Germany".

Echenberg asked an explanation of posters which have appeared in East Germany, bearing the photographs of Hitler and Eichmann, along with those of Adenauer and Willie Brandt.

"We don't trust the officials in Germany and in some of the international organizations, such as NATO", he was told. "They were taken to power by the Western powers. We can't trust a government which does nothing to prevent militarist tendencies".

Echenberg cited examples of a lack of freedom in Russia.

Lebedev replied that "there are different concepts of freedom in our two parts of the world."

COMMUNIST VICTORY

He asserted that "there is a belief in the victory of communism over the world one day".

Echenberg contented that "here we believe in the freedom to choose between two parties. This is opposed to your idea of world communism."

"We made our choice 43 years ago", Lebedev replied. "And I don't see any real difference between the Liberals and Conservatives in this country, or the Republicans and Democrats in the United States."

"Besides, it is not the aim of our party to export Communism to other countries. Trotsky, who believed this, wasn't supported by our party."

CITIZENS UNAWARE

Roman Karpishka asked why the Soviet citizens were originally unaware that nuclear explosions were taking place.

"Where did you hear that there were nuclear explosions before the declaration to the press?" Lebedev demanded. "There were none. The first explosion took place after the declaration".

Asked if he was in favour of nuclear tests, he replied "No, I am not. But we've achieved too much to permit anyone to endanger what we've done. We remember what happened in World War One when we were unprepared. But there's no joy over the tests in Russia — we realize quite clearly what the consequences can be".

UN Club To Hear Pitman

Sir James Pitman, Conservative M.P. and Chairman of the British Parliamentary Group for World Government, will be the featured speaker today at 8 pm in Moyse Hall.

"Disarmament, World Law, and U.N. Reform" will be the topic of the speech, which will be held under the joint auspices of the U.N. Club of McGill, the Montreal Association and the World Federalists of Canada.

The British Parliamentary Group for World Government, consisting of some 160 members from both parliamentary houses, has had considerable success in gaining acceptance of its views by the British Government.

This group and a similar group of Senators and Congressmen from the United States are associated with the World Association of Parliamentarians for World Government, an international organization of M.P.'s and former M.P.'s from 28 countries.

Their aim is to abolish war and to secure permanent peace by creating a World Parliament, with firmer executive authority than the U.N., which would enact world laws and provide an executive to administer them.

INTERNATIONAL COURT

They also advocate an International Court of Justice, with compulsory jurisdiction in all matters of dispute concerning these world laws, and a world police force to enforce these laws against all who commit or threaten to commit a breach thereof.

By these means the group hopes to secure universal, simultaneous, and complete disarmament of all nations.

HEES ADDRESSES PC'S

The Honourable George Hees, Minister of Trade and Commerce, will address the McGill Progressive Conservative Club today, on the topic "The Government's Trade Expansion Policy". The meeting takes place at 1 pm in Redpath Hall (at the north end of Redpath Library), and all members of the faculty and student body are invited to attend.

NOTICE TO ALL FOREIGN STUDENTS ATTENDING MCGILL UNIVERSITY

All foreign students attending the University for the 1961-62 session should report to the Canadian Immigration Officers who will be in Room 483 of the MacConnell Engineering Building on Wednesday, October 11 and Thursday, October 12, between 9 am and 4:30 pm. All students should bring their University identity cards, their valid passports, and their temporary entry certificates (pink).

Students who report to the Immigration Officers on these days will be able to make the necessary arrangements for extension of their entry permits, and will not be required to go to the Immigration Department as in previous years.

OCTOBER 11, 1961

Not By Committee Alone

TODAY MARKS the beginning of the '61 Blood Drive campaign at McGill, and as usual the committee has done its utmost to rouse the interest of the student body. Naturally, we wish them and the Red Cross the best of luck in this concerted effort, but, looking at past statistics, we are being optimistic if we predict even a 50 per cent turn-out.

Unfortunately, according to some of the older McGill students, this worthy event must be debased by all the juvenile implications of competition and trophies. Others object that they will not be subjected to the high-pressure tactics of Blood Drive organisers. The majority of the remaining yearly abstentions can be accounted for on the basis of ignorance or apathy.

To deal with our first assumption, we must turn to our limited stock of psychological phrases and explain that it is within the nature of most university students to respond more actively to the proposition of inter-university competition.

Past committees of the McGill campaign have attempted every possible approach in their appeal for more blood donors. Following the trend of popular opinion, at one time they merely informed the student body of the necessity of this particular drive, eliminating the additional efforts of posters and gimmicks. The result was a decrease in pints and empty clinic beds.

The accusation of ignorance is damagingly true, despite the annual efforts of Blood Drive organisers. Many McGillians are impervious to the fact that ours is the only clinic operating in the Province of Quebec during this period. Many ignore the fact that this vitally-needed plasma can only be used within a 20-day term; therefore, there is continual need for blood donors. Still others cannot see the mountain for the trees; and so continue to criticise the methods of the committee without endorsing the campaign.

Student leaders for innumerable years have attempted to encourage and increase participation in campus activities. In answer to the charge of apathy, we would like to remind McGillians that the annual Blood Drive is an event of a little more serious nature than intercollegiate sports contests or campus club affairs. It is an undertaking towards which apathy can neither be excused nor condoned.

We challenge the student body to prove our founded pessimism and contentions erroneous.

Holier Than Thou

AT THE TIME of South Africa's secession from the Commonwealth on the question of racial equality, Canadian representation took a strong and righteous stand against this display of discriminatory policy. Canadians in general loudly protest the indignities caused coloured citizens over the drive for integration in southern United States. Yet, on the flip side of this virtuous record we learn that Canada severely restricts the immigration of non-whites, even those from other Commonwealth countries. We would like to count this state of affairs an anachronism of Canadian immigration laws; but our liberalism is brought up short by the telling evidence of a recent poll on the matter. 52 per cent of our adult population feel that restrictive policies should continue to be enforced: 36 per cent believe there should be fewer laws of this nature: 8 per cent can voice no opinion at all on the subject: and 4 per cent are so incisive as to be placed in a "qualified" bracket. And despite these condemning statistics Canada expects to present an appealing and democratic front to new African and Asian nations and to answer Communist accusations of Western inequality.

To give Canadians the full benefit of the doubt, let us suppose that any poll is of a restricted nature and that in reality we do not condone discriminatory immigration laws. Under such a supposition we are faced with the question of moral responsibility. In the recent investigation of the McGill Rooms Registry, the C.L.C.'S National Committee on Human Rights charged McGill, not with a segregationist policy but with the deficiency of moral rectitude in not eliminating a clause which provoked such attitudes. The Canadian people can justly stand convicted of this same charge.

As I See It

Problems, Too, Have Problems

by GERRY POST

"Hello... Moe Oak? Are we on the air?"

"Yes, this is Moe Oak... what's your problem?"

"Well Moe, I was driving my cab when this elephant hails me..."

"Hold on! Elephants? What colour was it?"

"No! No! Moe... Don't get me wrong, I wasn't loaded... I mean this was the real thing... the kind I always usta see inna circus when I was a kid... you know the kind I mean Moe! You know don't ya?"

"Why err, were they Indian or African?"

"I tell ya Moe, I'll be honest... all foreign elephants look the same to me... I really can't spot any difference."

"It's very simple friend: Indian elephants have big ears and are easily tamed, while the African variety have considerably smaller ears and are dangerously wild. You should learn to be more observant pal... you might have gotten yourself killed if it was one of those wild ones."

"I know Moe, at first I thought it was my mother-in-law, boy that really shivered me... the last time she came to visit us she stayed four years."

"That's why mother-in-laws are better than money friend... because money you can always get rid of!"

"Ha! Ha! wonderful Moe, yuh know you're terrific... my wife and kids think you're terrific too... keep up the good work."

"Thanks, but hey wait a minute, before I read this commercial, what about your problem, you haven't told me what it is yet!"

"Oh ya! well as I was saying... this elephant hails me and asks me to take him to the airport."

"Well did you?"

"Sure! But my problem Moe was how much extra should I have charged him for his trunk?"

"Chuckie Chuckie, listen pal, the next time you try to pull a gag, just remember that Moe doesn't like old chestnuts! O.K.?"

"O.K. Moe, thanks for letting me talk to you... my wife and kids would like to talk with ya too Moe, but the only time I manage to get your line is around 3 o'clock in the morning and I didn't think it was fair to keep da kids up any later than one."

"Thanks for calling pal and watch out for those small eared elephants!"

"For you Moe I'd even respect my mother-in-law."

"Good and tell her Moe loves her' too... Goodnight."

With these words, an anonymous listener hangs up the receiver and falls peacefully asleep. Many of Moe's critics claim that his knowledge of social, political and economic affairs are both naive and superficial. His supporters, on the other hand, applaud his aggressive attitude when dealing with those whom he considers to be politically subversive or otherwise hostile to him.

Moe Oak is a man of sturdy opinions, and one who moves people to great emotional heights. Many claim they listen only because they hate him... but a greater number are devoted to his program because they consider him to be a man of the people, for the people and with the people. Here is where the great virtue, (existing and potential) of Moe Oak lies.

Not all of those who feel impelled to chat with Moe have problems as whimsical as the imaginary situation pictured above. In fact, a great deal of them are in serious need of someone to talk to. Moe knows this and tries his best to let them cry on his shoulder for as long as possible without dampening the interest of his audience. He does his utmost to comfort and advise, and in this respect both friend and foe will regret when there ain't no Moe.

The mere fact, however, that such a relatively large number of individuals are willing to confess their personal troubles over a widely listened to program, does point to a serious failure of our society.

Local welfare organizations and other professional associations do have free consultative agencies, which, unfortunately, are almost always resorted to only when matters have already gotten out of hand. Persons in need of financial, legal or psychiatric assistance are frequently unaware of those places where help can be gained.

Few middle class families think of turning to institutions of a charitable nature for matrimonial or vocational advice. Nevertheless, these facilities are available and in most cases effective.

Medical and Bar associations have traditionally been adverse to advertise in fear of being accused of trying to promote business. Where the Legal Aid and other similar societies are concerned, however, it is probably closer to the truth to say that these agencies already have many demands made upon them. In either instance, a well publicized explanation of how these consultative agencies can be of service, combined with the information as to where they can be obtained, would unquestionably be in the public interest. Similarly, where an expansion of qualified staff and facilities is called for, an immediate program, (both public and privately sponsored), to achieve this desirable end, should be the goal of every community spirited citizen.

Queen's Is Untouched By Civilization

Dear Madam:

As visitors to Kingston for the McGill-Queen's football game this past Saturday, we were appalled at the conspicuous absence of sportsmanship demonstrated by the hosting spectators. There is never an objection to good-hearted fun, but when the activities descend to the order of a street fight with the Kingston students resorting to all but strong-arm tactics, the flavour of the sport is lost. The Queens football team is scheduled to meet McGill on Saturday, November 11. We hope that a large representation of that University comes to Montreal, and at that time we will demonstrate how a civilized campus is run, and what real hospitality means.

Apology

Dear Madam,

In submitting a collection of poems to the McGill Daily, I accidentally included an exercise on a poem by Wallace Stevens entitled "Poetry is A Destructive Force".

Unfortunately this poem was selected for publication.

If I have in any way offended the student literary I wish to extend my humble apologies.

Smith To Lecture Novices WUSC Asks Delegates To Request More Aid

The third lecture in the Novice Training Series will be held today. Stuart Smith will speak on "Topic Analysis" in the Walter M. Stewart Room at 1 pm.

Student Presidents Acclaimed by CUS

Two students have been acclaimed by the Commerce Undergraduate Society as first and second year presidents of their respective classes. The C.U.S. also announced the nomination of candidates for the presidency of the third and fourth year classes.

Acclaimed as first year president was Gerald Piter. Marilyn Cohen was named president of second year commerce.

Three students were nominated for the presidency of the fourth year class. These are Ed. Bierbrier, Graham McGowan and Barry Wilson. Mike Pesner and Joe Zatter are the candidates from third year.

Ballots will be distributed before compulsory courses on Thursday, October 12th: in third year Economics 32i (W120) at 9 am; in fourth year Economics 412 (W20) at 4 pm.

Smith has distinguished himself in many campus activities. He has been President of the Students' Society, Chairman of the McGill Conference on World Affairs, and has also served as President of the Union.

In the Debating Union Smith was awarded the Gold Key, participated in a number of tournaments and public debates, and has won the Reford Cup. He has also served on the Debating Union Executive.

This series is specially designed for those students who have never debated on the intercollegiate level. The fourth and final lecture will deal with methods of proof.

QUESTIONS?

Each lecture is followed by a question period and every student is given an opportunity to choose a committee on which he would like to participate. Questions will also be answered by members of the Executive.

The lecture series will be followed by a number of practice debates in which the novices will be able to use the knowledge they have gained. The Novice Trials will take place at the end of the month. Successful participants will form the Intercollegiate Novice Team.

Students are reminded that attendance at the Novice Training Program is vital for intercollegiate competition. Participation in the lecture and workshop periods will give students the training required to compete.

Main Liberal Topic Is Electoral Reform

Alphonse Barbeau, political analyst and Vice-President of the Quebec Liberal Federation, will address the McGill Liberal Club today.

Barbeau, a well-known figure on the Quebec political scene, will speak on provincial electoral reform. The meeting is open to all students and will take place at 1 pm in the Cue Room of the McGill Union.

In the 1960 election a rural vote was worth seven Montreal votes, a fact which makes the Liberal victory of that year all the more remarkable, stated a spokesman for the club. The present government is anxious to redress this unbalanced situation, one which affects every urban voter in the Province of Quebec.

Mr. Barbeau will speak on both this and on the need for the government to establish a proportional control over the financing practices of political parties. Often in public opinion this is a cause of much graft and corruption.

At this same meeting, the club will nominate delegates to the annual convention of the Quebec Young Liberal Federation. The convention will be held this weekend in Montreal.

At the 16th National Assembly of World University Service of Canada, Dr. A. J. Gibson, National Chairman, urged delegates not to be hesitant in asking for grants to WUSC activities from their students' councils.

In his report to the Assembly at Carleton Friday, Dr. Gibson said that the local WUSC committees were not getting the grants they should from their councils "simply because they are not asking for them, or are not asking at the right time".

He also declared contributions from the local level to the national and international programs of WUSC should be made uniform to ease planning at the national level.

VANIER PRESIDE

Governor General and Mme. Vanier presided at the opening of the Assembly Friday. This marks the first national assembly at which the honorary president has been present.

Dr. Davidson Dunton, president of Carleton, welcomed the delegates and guests. Members of the diplomatic corps were present for the opening ceremonies.

This year's edition of Treasure Van was officially opened by Dr. A. W. Trueman, Director of the Canada Council, immediately after the Assembly opening.

Treasure Van is an international bazaar sponsored annually at Canadian universities by WUSC. Proceeds received from Treasure Van are used to help students all over the world.

Indians Collapse, 58-7, After Fine First Half

The McGill Indians were overwhelmed by a fierce Rosemount Bomber team in a game played under the lights at Morgan Park. A strongly partisan Bomber crowd witnessed the most lopsided victory of the season as the Bombers amassed over 300 offensive yards to ring up a 58-7 victory.

As far as the Indians were concerned, the Bombers hit them with too much for too long a period. Rosemount, the 1960 Canadian Junior Champs, has a big, rough, fast squad which can steam roller the opposition into submission at will.

INDIANS LED 7-6

Although outscored 20-7 in the first half, the Indians played far and away their best game to date. At one point, in the first quarter, McGill led 7-6 on a touchdown by Val Rutkis. This TD came on a pass, after a sustained drive originating on the McGill 38 yard line.

Bruce Johansson, the final answer to the Indians' quarterback problem, engineered this march in a masterful demonstration of his ability. He mixed his plays in excellent style and had backs Mike Johanson and Doug Pascal carrying for most of the yardage.

For the first time in recent games, the Indians showed some semblance of a passing attack. In this particular drive, they completed three out of four Johansson passes.

Rosemount scoring resulted from a crushing ground attack. Jerry Yaccato, a fleet-footed half-back, accounted for two of the Bomber touchdowns in this quarter, with Alastair Lawrence scoring the third.

The second quarter proved to be McGill's best, both offensively and defensively. Although held off the score sheet, they hammered out four first downs on the ground and passed for three others. The defensive squad, headed by Chris Schmidt and Brian Coleman, held the powerful Bombers scoreless.

Both teams enjoyed sustained drives in the second quarter; however, alert defensive squads held when the chips were down.

FINALLY OUTCLASSED

From the opening kick-off in the second half it was evident to all that the Indians were outclassed. Bill Bleakely scored two majors in this half while Jim Ritchie, Yaccato, Butch Hollinger and Leon Jacobs accounted for one TD apiece.

In retrospect, it was evident that the Indians have finally come up with some offensive power. Their first half play indicated to all that the potential is there. McGill came up with 8 first downs in the game, four of which were by virtue of their passing attack. For one half of this encounter the Indians were a real threat to the Junior champs. Only superior conditioning and an older and heavier ball club steam-rolled McGill to defeat in the second half.
